The letter to State Committeeman John Rone, in which Judge Werts reiterated by determination not to accept a nomination was treated by his friends as not at all binding. They said that Young prevalled upon Judge Werts to say he would not run, and was tring to hold him to this promise in apite of the quite evident desire of the party to nominate him, and that Judge Werts's letter to John Hone was only another example of his superiority of character.

Lithographic portraits of Judge Werts were suck up in the hobbies of all the hotels and up nevery dead wait of the city, and the bomers were this morning working like Trojans.

Even the friends of Young admitted that nothing stood in the way of the city, and the londing stood in the way of the nominated of Werts but his own letter of acceptance than his opponents before the Convention.
